

Relaxation

came only when the job at hand was finished. Then we could lean back and enjoy a cigar, or perhaps catch a "nooner" in the shade--or in the sun, for that matter. The most keenly anticipated diversion--and also the most sporadic--was mail call.

(above, left) This photo won second place in the black-and-white division of Galveston's photo contest. It was snapped by LCDR Anderson.